“ Within each of us there is the heart of a Lion, the courage to simply be who & what we are regardless of others opinions or our own fears. May we each know our own beauty & right to be today. May we drop down into the heart of the Lion within & say, when it rears it's head, “Not today! Be humble Lion, for you are made of earth, be noble Lion, for you are made of stars...”

“ Words cannot express the sorrow in knowing Chris is gone. To lose such a wonderful person is absolutely heartbreaking. He had a positive impact on my life over the last two years. He will be missed dearly and remembered by all. I'm thinking of you all during this difficult time. I will forever cherish the stories, fun times playing video games and thoughtful conversations we shared during our friendship.

“ Bubba at many times was one of my favorite person to work with at Friendly's. We would have our moments of frustration with each other like most common workers do, but we always quickly got over them and let them go. We would often talk about music, politics and our shared belief in Christ. We had some differences in opinions on all three topics, but it never let us think any less of each other. I still remember the day I first saw Bubba at work. I saw him through the window between the kitchen and the server station. And thought "Cool another cook. I hope he does well." OK they might not have been my exact thoughts in those exact words, but ok, I'm rambling now. I loved when he would call me or text me at night and ask me a theological question. Words can't describe how I'm feeling right now, like I'm sure everyone else who knew him, and even though I didn't spend as much time with him as the others at work did, he still meant a lot to me. I'm glad that despite his views about conspiracy theories, that he seemed to embrace Christ and wanting to know Him more. Anyway, before this gets too much like a therapy session, I just want to say I'll miss him and my only regret is that I didn't get to hang out with him more. And finally to Gabe and Zach, just know we are all grieving with you. Rest in peace Bubba!
